Dr. Dina Vyortkina holds two Master's degrees (Educational Administration and Instructional Design) and PhD in Educational Leadership and Administration from the Florida State University, USA. Her UK and US expertise involves, but is not limited to teaching in Higher Education, instructional design, organizational development, performance improvement and human resource development, blended and online learning and teaching, faculty professional development, technology integration in higher education, learning managements systems, and active learning spaces.

In October 2013 Dr. Vyortkina returned to her native Kazakhstan to work at Nazarbayev University as Head of Instructional Technology, where she leads initiatives in enhancing learning, teaching, assessment, and research with technologies university-wide.

Dr. Vyortkina was a member of the International Association for Online Learning (iNACOL) task force to develop standards for teachers working in online and blended environment. She is currently a reviewer and program committee member for SITE--Society for Information Technology and Teacher Education International Conference, Ed-Media -- World Conference on Educational Multimedia, Hypermedia and Telecommunications, and Global Learn Asia Pacific-- Global Conference for Learning and Technology, She is an associate editor for the International Journal of Cyber Ethics in Education and a member of the advisory boards of Digital Education Showcase Asia and EduTECH Asia.